Standardized costs of attendance are established and published on the website each year and are applied equally across similar groups of students (for example, all full-time, in-county students living off-campus).

COST OF ATTENDANCE

The cost of attendance (COA), also known as the budget, is an estimate of what it costs the typical student to attend Collin College for a given time period and includes the following components:

Tuition and Fees - The actual costs for tuition and fees plus an allowance for class/lab fees for a Collin College student. The actual costs that a student incurs may vary depending on the student's enrollment (full-time,  $\frac{3}{4}$  time, etc.) and their residency status. The Tuition & Fees component will be adjusted to the student's actual enrollment.

Books and Supplies - The average cost of books and supplies for a typical Collin College student. This does not include unusual costs for special groups of students (E.g., Paramedic or Culinary Arts majors).

Food and Housing - A reasonable estimate of what it would cost to live in Collin County while attending school. Actual costs may vary based on location and other individual choices and circumstances. For students living with parents, we only provide the food component.

Note: We assume that all Out-of-State students are "off-campus".

Transportation - The estimated transportation costs for a typical Collin College student. Actual costs may vary.

Personal and Miscellaneous - A reasonable allowance for other living expenses incurred by a typical student. Again, actual costs may vary.

Factors Affecting Cost of Attendance:

Collin College published cost of attendance is based on a typical student enrolled full-time (15 hours each semester) for the Fall and Spring semesters. Please note that the student's Tuition and Fees component is adjusted each semester on the lock date of that semester to reflect the student's actual tuition and fees.

Residency status can affect a student's cost of attendance since Collin College charges separate tuition amounts based on a student's residency. In-county, out-of-county or out-of-state/country

Housing can affect a student's cost of attendance is if they are living off campus, in their own residence, in student housing or if they are living with their parents. Generally speaking, students living in their own residence or in student housing have increased living costs as compared to students living at home.

A final factor that can affect a student's cost of attendance is if their enrollment is less-than-half-time (less than 6 credit hours) for the semester. Federal regulations dictate that for students enrolled less-than-half-time, schools are not allowed to include the Personal and Miscellaneous component and can choose not to include the Food and Housing component. At Collin College, we do not include these two components when students are enrolled less-than-half-time.
